Hakonechloa 'ALL GOLD'

Hakonechloa 'BENI-KAZI'

Hakonechloa 'AUREOLA'

Hakonechloa 'ALBO-STRIATA'

Also known as Japanese Forest Grasses, Hakonechloa are revered for their colorful foliage, outstanding mounded habit, and elegant textures. Many cultivars offer foliage in luminescent hues of gold, while others demonstrate green blades with bold red highlights in the fall. Fubuki, introduced by Briggs Nursery, is a standout, with its highly variegated blades and pronounced pink highlights at summer's end.

Hakonechloa's gracefully arching leaf blades compliment bolder textured plants, making it an excellent accent plant in mixed shady borders. Its cascading habit pleasingly softens the edges of rocky walls and deck pots. They are extremely effective planted en mass, where even a gentle breeze can cause a ripple to flow through the blades. Variegated forms are best in shade; however, greener forms tolerate some sun quite well. In the fall, pink to red highlights develop at the tips, and airy seed heads provide additional texture, as the foliage slowly turns to honey brown.

'Fubuki' PP#21,757 - White and green stripes with strong pink fall highlights.

'Aureola' - Gold blades striped with green, and pinkish red fall highlights.

'Beni-Kazi' - Deep green foliage with very strong red highlights in the fall.

'Albo-Striata' - Cream Stripes against green blades.

'All Gold' - Completely gold foliage.

Hakonechloa macra - Medium green foliage with red fall highlights.
